Spring of the democratic congress and administration of the democrat opposition, they nevertheless succeeded in wresting from wealth and plutocracy a portion of the means of increasing their ill-gotten gains, and in rendering McKinleyism a lost cause. DUCKED IN SACKS.

But the Sultan's Affection Made the Operation a Mild One.

Odd stories are coming from Constan tipople in connection with the recent eartheunkes. One has been told of Gjussaf Block, physician to the sultan. The earthquake damaged the part of the palace in which he lives, and suddenly two favorite wives of the sultan were precipitated through the ceiling into the doctor's room. All three fled from the Unilding before it collapsed and sultan no choice but to tie up his two wives in sacks and plunge them into the Bosporus, they having been gazed upon by a profane giaour. Fortunately the sultan cherished affection for both of them, and having consulted the grand mufti he saw his way to have them punished symbolically. They were put into sacks which were properly sewed up and duly taken to sequestered spots or the banks of the Bosporus, and in the presence of a number of praying imams gently dipped into the soft, blue waters, after which the women were deemed to be purified. They were then removed to a new home and restored to their conjugal rights. - London Truth.

A Man Who Looked on Calmly While the Surgeons Cut Off His Foot.

Thomas E. Byrnes, a molder, had a portion of his right foot crushed by being ram over by a Lake Roland car yesterday morning, which necessitated the amputation of about one-half of the foot. During the amputation Byrnes gave one of the most stolid exhibitions of nerve and impassiveness to pain ever witnessed. Drs. R. F. Blake and Geer made preparations to put their patient under the influence of chloroform for this purpose, but when Byrnes was informed of what they were about to do he amazed them by telling them to go ahead with the cutting, but that he didn't want a narcotic. The physicians feared he cealdn't stand it, robust as he is, and plairly told aim so, but Byrnes was plairly told aim so, but Byrnes was firm and said he would get through it all right.

Then the surgeons proceeded as gently as possible. The pain must have been Just imagine taking a knife terrible and sinking it down into the flesh, severing bones and joints! "It's enough to make one shudder," said a bystander, a surgeon, too, accustomed to the horrors of a surgical hospital. But Byrnes never even winced. He sat in the chair with folded arms, braced himself against the back of the seat and watched the movements of the knife. There was no moun, no rolling of the eyes, no twitchingabsolutely no indication of the terrible pain except the pallor of his face. The operation over, Byrnes thanked the surgeons, who seemed to be far more concerned and anxious that the job come to an end than the heroic patient. - Bal-
